Planners are called upon to answer complex land use questions. Airport operations and needs are a specialized land use. The conference provides an opportunity for planners to better understand airport needs on both the air and land side of operations and how land use decisions as well as changes in technology and airport use are changing and what is required to keep pace. The conference allows staff to meet subject matter experts with the FAA as well as related agencies and engineers to help better explain and understand this unique land use and how state and federal regulations should be applied to the local investment.

the airport requires review through the Planning Division for compliance with the Land Development Code. As a unique land use, it is important to understand how best our development standards can work or be changed to achieve the development outcomes we are looking for out at the airport. Potential opportunities or projects sometimes are difficult to align with code standards meant for very different uses. As well, it is very helpful to understand the various outside review standards and processes that impact what will and won't happen at the airport and how funding is obtained. Understanding all of this will hopefully streamline processes and achieve intended outcomes.
